A PICKWICKIAN JUNIUS.

The writer of the vindictive articles which have recently appeared in the Maine Standard, containing the most reckless and shameful aspersions upon the motives and character of Speaker Blaine, has evidently found it less comfortable to bear the odium which his slander has provoked, since the "stab" no longer furnishes a shield to his identity. The self-styled modern "Junius" takes the back track, in this week's Standard, in the following style.

It having been represented to the writer of the series of articles published in the Standard during the past few weeks, signed "Junius," a portion of them is understood by some of the friends of Mr. Blaine to constitute an attack upon his personal integrity, and official honor, it is due to truth and justice to say that our remarks were, intended to apply only to him as a public man and candidate for public office, and must not be construed as reflecting on his honor as a private gentleman. In any respect, the articles are understood to have transcended the legitimate bounds of political criticism of a public man, they must be taken with the modification which this paragraph implies.

The Empress Regent and Prime Minister Ollivier make arrangement for the defense of Paris. Do they imagine that France is Paris? Time was, says the New York Herald, when a miserable old castle would check the progress of an invading army; but that was before railroads were known and before the telegraph made news fly on the lightning's wing. If the Prussians appear in force within 20 miles of Paris, Paris is gone. Not twenty Frenchmen could be hired to defend the city. But even if it were defended what would it signify? France would be not the less at the mercy of the conqueror. Paris might hold out for a day, or day or two; but Paris isolated—Paris, a city of shop-keepers, who live by bleeding Americans and Englishmen—France would be at the mercy of the invader. Depend upon it, before Prussia will have time to fling upon it shot and shell, the shop-keepers and the sans culottes would surrender. Eugenie, dear; Ollivier, my boy, don't talk any more nonsense about Paris. The defence of France ought to have been on the border.

At the Kennebec Republican County Convention at Augusta, on Wednesday, the following nominations were made. For Senators, Hon. Joshua Gray of Gardiner, Hon. Reuben Foster of Waterville, and Hon. Geo. E Minot of Belgrade. For County Commissioner, Hon. Nathaniel Graves of Vienna. For County Attorney, Wm. P. Whitehouse, Esq., of Augusta. For County Treasurer, Hon. Alanson Starks of Augusta. For Sheriff, Ashur H. Barton, Esq., of Benton.

THE NATHAN MURDER.—The evidence of Wm. Kelley, the housekeeper's son in the Nathan inquest, yesterday, failed to furnish grounds for suspicion of his guilt. He admitted his enlistment in Lawrence, Mass., under an assumed name in 1864, and that since his discharge from the army in 1865 he had been without regular employment and in destitution of previous testimony related that he had a conversation with two men on Madison Square on the evening before the murder. Other testimony was offered to prove that the "dog" with which the murdered had been catamitized had been seen about Mr. Nathan's premises over a year since. The three colored men arrested on suspicion of having possession of the late Nathan's watch, were to-day discharged, but another man is now held in custody on suspicion of having disposed of some of the missing Nathan's jewelery on the day after the murder.

NEW MEXICO. Advices from Santa Fe state that General Getty has established his quarters there. Great interest is manifested in the recently discovered silver mines of Raison-City and Burro's Mountain. A large number of returns of assays of ores taken from all parts of this region, were received by the California mail lately, and some of the assays by the best mineral authorities of the Pacific coast, pronounce these the richest of mines. The mines are supposed by many to be the "Lost Mines" of which tradition has handed down such remarkable accounts, as there is unmistakable evidence of their having been worked at some period long in the past.

FATAL RAILROAD ACCIDENT. A terrible accident occurred at the west end of the Kansas Pacific Railroad track, Tuesday night. A heavily loaded iron train getting beyond control in consequence of the iron clogging the brakes, ran into a boarding train, demolishing two rear cars and crushing in the end of a sleeping car. Six persons were killed and six or eight wounded. The killed, as far as ascertained, were Mexicans, sleeping under the train. The engineer and fireman of the iron train fled.

Havana letters mention continued skirmishing in the Eastern Department between the Cubans and Spaniards, and in which the latter are usually worsted. In other sections of the Island inactivity prevails. The authorities continue to execute captured Cubans, while the cholera and yellow fever prevail among the Spaniards.

At the Ohio Republican Convention on Wednesday, General Isaac R. Sherwood was nominated for Secretary of State; Judge G. W. McElwain, Judge of the Supreme Court; Gen. W. F. Wilson, Comptroller; P. W. Huse, Member of the Board of Public Works. Resolutions in favor of a revenue tariff, registration of foreign purchased vessels, and one declaring sympathy with Germany in the present war were adopted with great applause.

Gen. Neal Dow, Me's letter recently published, thinks that while a third party may be the only alternative in States where nothing is to be hoped for from existing parties, yet that in this State, the Republican party is now so thoroughly temperance that temperance men will do the cause the greatest good by acting cordially with that organization.

WAR NOTES.

Paulmo announced to the Corps Legislatif on Monday the formation of the new Ministry as follows:

Count Palikao, Minister of War; Prince de la Tour D'Auvergne, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Count D'Osmoy, Minister of Interior; Count Parieu, Minister of Justice; Genouilly, Minister Marine; Pierre Magne, Minister of Finance; Jerome David, Minister of Public Works; Jules Brome, Minister of Commerce; Buffet, Minister of the Council of State.

Rome's special says the new Cabinet meet with satisfaction and tends to unite Paris.

Paris had quieted and the streets were patrolled by police.—The Tribune's describes the scene in the Chambers as that of a most violent character. The galleries were thronged with people and the Tuileries garden closed and a large force of troops to protect the Empress.—The Guard is said to have refused to fire on the people. Ollivier was interrupted in his speech by cries from the left demanding the dismissal of the Ministry, and it was proposed as a new leader. Jules Favre said the Chambers should assume the rule of the country. The Emperor's acts fully exposed and he should be tried.

A grand council was held in the Tuileries and blows were exchanged. Ministers and Deputies, De Valmy has his face scratched.—A Loyalist reports that the Prince Imperial French Legation in that city in W. T. Smith the Emperor's confidential. Also that Smith brought with him dispatches from Eugenie's lovers and the friends of the Duke of Brunswick and Prince Napoleon at Chalons is reported to have left Chalons to meet the enemy and full of military ardor.—The English Embassy at Paris have been advised that the recent Prussian losses were enormous—All Frenchmen between 20 and 35 years, who have remained and not already members of the Garde Mobile, have been called out.—A credit of 25,000,000 francs was voted by the Chambers for the families of the Garde Mobile.—The Corps Legislatif adopted a law for national defense by unanimous vote, and prolonged applause.

THE SITUATION OF THE ARMIES.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier:

So far as can be ascertained from the latest advices from the field of operations in Eastern France, the positions of the contending armies appear as follows:

The French army is entrenched along the river Moselle, from Sierck, Thionville and Metz, as far as Nancy, thence among the Vosges mountains as far as Phalsbourg—which commands the passes to the plain of Alsace, on which Strasbourg is now isolated and probably besieged.

This line of battle is in the form of a crescent and extends over one hundred miles.—The Prussians, therefore, being concentrated in front of Metz, possess the interior line, and can strike either wing before the French can reinforce them when assailed. But as the country from Nancy is well protected by spurs of the Vosges mountains, comparatively but few troops are required to defend this part of the right wing. Therefore, most of the French army will be concentrated and entrenched behind the Moselle river, between Nancy and Metz. Beyond Metz the line of the Moselle is protected by the formidable Fortress of Thionville, and nearer the Prussian frontier, by the fortified lines thrown up by Vauban, and in which Marshal Villars arrested the march of Marlborough.

The Moselle is navigable for steamers from the frontier, even as far as to within five miles of Nancy. During the present extreme drouth, it may now be forded in many places, and thus enable the Prussians to cross at unexpected places.

Metz is a first class fortress, and cannot be taken by assault. In ordinary times, the plain around it, for the distance of six miles, can be flooded by the sluice gates built upon the river Seille, but at the present time these gates are useless, and if they were available, the guns of Fruge could destroy them from the distance of three miles.

It seems probable that the next effort of the Prussians will be to force the passage of the Moselle, somewhere between Metz and the frontier, and then, if successful, their victorious army will gain possession of the Chalons road to Paris. They will also have the advantage of the railroad via Treves and Coblentz, as a base and medium of supplies. Defeat of the left wing of the French army will compel the evacuation of Metz and Nancy, and the taking of a new position behind the river Meuse, forty miles distant. Supposing the Prussians victorious, Paris is still 210 miles distant, and the route, though passing over fertile plains, leads over the glorious battle ground of Valmy, and other fields where French pride and valor will contest most desperately, the advance of the invader. H.

THE PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

In the House of Lords on Wednesday, at 5 p. m., the Royal Commission, consisting of the Lord Chancellor, Earl Kimberley, Viscount Sydney and the Marquis of Normanby, brought in the Queen's speech. The House of Commons was summoned, and soon appeared, with Mr. Gladstone and others at their head. The speech was then read by the Lord Chancellor as follows:

My Lords and Gentlemen:

The state of public business enables me to release your attendance upon Parliament. I continue to receive from all foreign powers assurances of their good will and friendship, but I have witnessed, with grief and pain, on both domestic and foreign grounds, the recent outbreak of war between two powerful Nations, allies to this country. My best exertions have been used to arrest the great calamity. I shall now direct constant and anxious attention to a strict observance of the duties and rights of neutrality. I have cheerfully assented to measures submitted by your wisdom to enlarge the powers of the Executive, not only for the discharge of international duties, but for the prevention of acts injurious to the interests of this country. I shall make every living endeavor to check the operation of the causes leading to the enlargement of the area of the conflict, and shall contribute, if opportunity offers, to the restoration of early and honorable peace. If I have tendered to the belligerent powers, treaties identical in form, which will afford additional security to Belgium against the hazards of war on her frontier. The treaty has been signed by Count Bernstorff for the North German Confederation, and the French Envoy has, although that he has authority to sign a concurring instrument, and the receipt of full power therefor. Other powers, parties to the treaty of 1839, have been invited, and they are likely to accede to the engagement.

The shocking murders in Greece had produced a painful impression in Europe, and have drawn attention to the serious questions existing in that country. My unremitting efforts will be directed to secure a complete and searching inquiry into the facts.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I thank you for the liberal provision made by you for the ordinary service of the year, and for the additional supplies of men and money voted in view of the altered circumstances of the continent. The recent steps promise to meet the new changes thus created, without revising the proper balance of revenue and expenditure. The act for the repression of agrarian crimes and to maintain order in Ireland, has answered its purpose thus far. From the act regulating the occupation of land, I anticipate the restoration of peaceful relations between the landlord and the tenant, and of confidence and benevolence. Legislation duly protecting life and property. I hope now in more easy and I rely on the loyalty and affection of my Irish subjects.

I have been pleased to consign in the bill for national education in England the new guaranty for the moral and social well-being of the nation's prosperity and power. The agricultural act and that for the extradition of criminals tend to strengthen four friendly relations with other powers. The act regulating settlements for short times, I hope will increase the efficiency of the forces, promote

TO THE PUBLIC.

HAVING added materially facilities to my works, and engaged the shoe-fitting artist, I feel confident in guaranteeing to the public the execution of work that cannot be surpassed. I need not call your attention to the economy of Rubber Coats and Soled Garments, but will add that recent discoveries in the art have enabled us to do most any fabric without any "seam," and may be made to look as well as new. Among the many articles, I will mention the following:

CERTIFICATES OF CURES.

This is to certify, that Mrs. Manchester has doctored in my family for six years with marked success. She has cured my wife of dropsy in its worst form, my daughter of spinal disease of five years standing, a dozen of others in my family, my self of bilious fever. And I would recommend her to the public as a skillful physician, and every way worthy of patronage.

JOHN, HONSON.

Portland, Maine.

This is to certify that Mrs. Manchester has cured me of scrofula or skin disease of five years standing; I have consulted the best professions in the country and have derived no benefit. I called on Mrs. Manchester ten months ago, and commenced treatment, the sores, three in number, have healed and I have been by my exertions, and am now a well man. I am confident if I had not consulted this lady I should always have been a cripple.

Get all the bills she gives for a fair trial, and I have no doubt you will be benefitted.

S. T. KING,

Biddeford, May 2, 1870.

March 26, 1870.

A Case of Spinal Disease Cured.

DEAR MADAM:—When you were in this place last summer, I called you to examine my case, which was spinal disease. I had not used my limbs to stand on them for three years. I have consulted eight or ten Physicians, none of them done me any good; but I still grew worse, but by your skill I am now a happy woman, for I have full power and strength of my limbs. I must say to the afflicted go and consult Mrs. Manchester, and give her a fair trial, and you will be well paid.

Very truly yours,

JANE HALE,

Lewiston, Me.

ONE OF THE GREATEST CURES ON RECORD!

This is to certify, that I have been sick for five years and have been to see a number of physicians, and one would tell me one thing, and another would tell me I had another disease, and then I would go another, and he would tell me was entirely different story, until I got almost discouraged. I told the Doctors that I felt as if something was eating me up inside, but they all laughed at the idea of anything of the kind, and I was nervous.—For the last two years I commenced growing very large at times, and it seemed to me that my stomach was filled up, and when I retired at night, as if something was in my throat, and I would almost suffocate. Reading Mrs. Manchester's advertisement, I was induced to go and consult her. She examined me and told me I had a live animal in my stomach. She said if I don't know what to call it, but it is brown, and looks as much like a [illegible] as anything. She told me so correctly about my feelings that I took some of her medicine, she told me I would be very sick and so I was. I vomited for three days, and the third day I threw up something that resembled [illegible] a horrible looking thing about three inches long, about the large as my finger, and I think I owe my life to Mrs. Manchester. She told me what no other doctor ever did or could.—My health is rapidly improving. I say to every one go and see her, don't hear what this one or that one says, but go and you will be perfectly satisfied.

H. REED, H. KING, Portland, Me.

H. REED,

Mrs. [illegible] We certify to the truth of the above.

I feel that I owe it to see Mrs Manchester, as I had been [illegible] a daughter of mine [illegible] with pills and [illegible] which she has been [illegible] for the last two years, and [illegible] of physicians of all kinds, and she has [illegible] applications to [illegible] applied, but all to no effect, but she [illegible] gave up hopes. I called on Mrs. Manchester, and she told me that I need not go to Mrs. Manchester, and that she would be relieved to [illegible] her daughter has been ill during [illegible] years, and I have tried [illegible] medicines [illegible] now, and I have no faith in anything, which [illegible] my daughter is able to be around the house all the time. She also takes up all on bullet without any trouble or is examined by her. I feel that I owe it to her to be relieved to [illegible] health. My

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

The Emperor still at the Front!

The French Concentrating on the Line of the Moselle!

Large Captures of War Material by the Prussians!

The Prussian Losses also very Heavey!

Revolutionary Outbreaks in Marseilles!!

The Prince Imperial said to be in London with his Mother's Diamonds!

RESTORATION OF THE ORLEANS FAMILY PREDICTED!

VIOLENT DISCUSSIONS IN THE CORPS LEGISLATIF!!

THE EMPEROR STILL IN COMMAND.—THE DESPATCHES PRINCE IMPERIAL.

London, Aug. 11. The latest official dispatch from Metz, dated Thursday evening, says that Napoleon went that morning to the headquarters of Marshal Bazaine, who resumed command of the troops concentrated at Metz.

This is an indirect way of contradicting the rumor that Marshal Bazaine was to be made Generalissimo of the whole army of the Rhine.

The Emperor is blind to his own incompetency, and disregarding the universal outcry, against it, he will cling to the command in chief until another defeat exhausts the national patience. He gives out that he will never return to Paris alive, unless as conqueror.

La France asserts that the Prince Imperial, whose return to Paris was rumored by all the papers yesterday, is still with his papa at the seat of war.

THE FRENCH FALLING BACK TO THE MOSELLE.

London, Aug. 11. Advices from the Prussian front up to 10 o'clock on Wednesday night state that the French army was falling back to the line at Moselle. They were harassed by Prussian cavalry which had already passed Saarbruck, Falquemont and Leschanges.

MORE CAPTURES BY THE PRUSSIANS.

Stores of all kinds and a railway train had fallen into the hands of the Prussians. They had also taken the small Fortress of Hutzelstamm in the Vosges, which the French had evacuated, leaving their guns and prisoners.

MORE DETAILS OF MCMAHON'S FIGHT.

Tuesday, Aug. 11. The Journal Officiel has advices from Metz of four o'clock yesterday evening. Thesedetails of the battle of Froschwiller are still meagre. McMahon had his horse killed under him.

A regiment of cavalry of the reserve corps, made a reconnoissance of the corps of Gen. Failly, posted in the field at the close of the day, and during the retreat.

The pursuit of the enemy was vigorous at one point, and became a mere reconnoissance. McMahon, after being 25 hours in the saddle, passed the day, (Sunday) at Sayerne, which was abandoned Sunday night and occupied by the Prussians. Some of their advance pickets came up with our rear guard, but were driven back without much difficulty.

THE PRUSSIAN LOSSES VERY GREAT.

Up to one o'clock this morning no attack had been made on our left wing. Our forces were still entrenching in good order.

At the battle of Froschwiller, a corps of volunteer surgeons, wearing white badges as instituted by the Geneva Convention, everywhere rendered the most praiseworthy services.

The Moniteur says that a person worthy of entire confidence, who has just arrived from Alsace, states that the Prussian losses in the recent fighting were beyond computation. In the Vosges division the greatest carnage prevails. The Garde Mobile manifest much enthusiasm.

OUTBREAKS IN MARSEILLES.

Marseilles, Aug. 11. For two days the city has been greatly agitated by the demonstrations of the people. Great crowds assemble and demand a mass. Last evening, groups of radicals, seeming without central intent, entered the city hall and endeavored to overturn the municipal government. Troops quickly arrived, with stringent orders to arrest the rioters, and 10 arrests have been made. The city is now perfectly tranquil.

NAPOLEON AND SON AT METZ.

London, Aug. 11. A Metz dispatch in the ministerial paper says the Prince Imperial is still at that place, and that the Emperor will certainly make a stand there. The Prince de Joinville and Duc de Aumale are at Weisbaden.

It is reported that the Prince has asked leave to serve in the French fleet.

EXPECTATION OF THE HOUSE OF ORLEANS PREDICTED.

It is the conviction here in the clubs and among the people, That the rule of the Bonaparte dynasty is over. The restoration of the House of Orleans is anticipated. The Count of Paris is now in England.

Paris, Aug. 10—via London. American consuls and bullets from London are in great demand at Cherbourg.

Last night there was great activity in the embarkation of troops for the Baltic.

AN OFFICIAL DENIAL.

London, Aug. 11. The Austrian Minister here is authorized to deny the report that Italy and Austria are sending troops to save Napoleon.

THE DEFENCE OF PARIS.

Paris, Aug. 11. The Journal de Soir says that Admiral Rocfere de Noury, will take command of the defences of Paris, and that 800 cannoniers from the navy have been placed under his orders to man the guns of the forts.

The Paris Seicle says that the municipal elections, as far as heard from, show a triumph for the Democratic candidates.

THE MILITARY SITUATION.

Le Francois states that the situation in Germany is as follows: "The French hold the Vosges and their passages. The Prussians are amassing at their ease."

The Opinion Nationale says, that the reported restoration of the defences of Paris is a farce.

A few scattered diggers are employed and kept to work to delude the public.

Paris, Aug. 11. The Revell and Rappel, the radical journals seized last night, have been entirely suppressed by the ministerial decree published to-day.

PROCLAIMING THE REPUBLIC.

La Liberte says that a lot of crazy fellows tried this morning to proclaim the Republic at Toulouse.

BELGIAN NEUTRALITY.

The same journal says that the last official act of Grammont was the signing of a treaty with England to secure the neutrality of Belgium.

THE WOUNDED AT METZ.

London, Aug. 11.—Telegrams from Metz give the assurance that Marshal Bazaine is in command of the French Army; that the Emperor is a mere nominal head. Two corps now have their headquarters. The others are under Marshal Mc-

MOVEMENTS AT WORTH.

It is stated that at the battle of Worth the Prussians charged the French eleven times. A wood was finally fought through, and finally fell fighting in it was accidentally discovered, and successfully to direct a retreat on Metz.

The City Council of Brussels have voted an address of thanks to Queen Victoria, for Belgium's neutrality. The fund is for the benefit of Antwerp decline, to transact any

FRENCH ARMY SHORT OF PROVISIONS.

It is said that the French Commissariat is short, and the provisions utterly inadequate.

It is stated that the Bois de Boulogne must be sacrificed to the exigencies of the defence.

The Pall Mall Gazette reaffirms, that the Imperial Crown and the Imperial Jewels are

DISCUSSION IN THE CHAMBERS.

Aug. 11. In the discussion yesterday, Favre demanded immediate action. The Ministry in reply, the people, and that their report for debate.

M. David rejected the desire for time.

Others also urged action at once.

M. David, we place upon you the responsibility of delaying deliberation, to which Daru replied, "you may assume it," which was received by a monace and Favre acted the part with having promised to invade the territory, while now they were on the soil.

The session was then postponed till next day, the meeting dispersed in disorder. The people made a warm greeting was extended.

Paris, Aug. 11. The Courier des Etats hitherto a warm supporter of Napoleon, says this morning: What matters it is a man named Ollivier, if this man is to be beaten? What matters it is a man named Napoleon, if Napoleon played out, and his hand is to hold a sword? We do not know, when there is a question of the salvation the honor and of the grandeur of

HEADQUARTERS REMOVED FROM METZ.

Paris, 11—3.30 P. M. La Liberte has positive information that the Imperial headquarters are no longer at Metz.

A PROCLAMATION BY KING WILLIAM.

London, 11th—The King of Prussia has issued the following proclamation:

We, William, King of Prussia, make known to the inhabitants of the French territory occupied by the German forces, that, the Emperor Napoleon, having by sea and land attacked the German Nation, except my lives in peace with the French people, have taken command of the German armies to repel the aggression, and by military events have been led to pass the French frontier. We wage against soldiers, not citizens, therefore, the latter may continue secure, in person and property, so long as they abstain from hostile acts, and we grant them protection as a matter of right. The Generals commanding corps will decide what measures are necessary towards individual communities violating the usages of war. They will also regulate the requisitions necessary to sustain their troops, and fix the difference of exchange between the German and French currencies in order to facilitate dealings between the soldiers and citizens.

Signed WILLIAM.

Given at Saarbruck, on the 11th day of August, 1870.

FRENCH OFFICIAL ACCOUNTS UNTRUE.

London, 11th—A correspondent of the N. Y. Herald, who was present at the battle of Worth, telegraphs the following from Carlsruhe:

The French official accounts of the battle of Worth are wholly untrue. The French attacked the Prussians, and found them in a strong position, and were driven back with great loss. The French retreated in confusion, losing many guns and thousands of prisoners. The French fought desperately, but were overwhelmed by numbers. The Prussians captured 10,000 men, including 1 T. French officers. The Prussian loss in killed and wounded is not large in proportion to that of the French.

The French fled in such great confusion that they left their dead unburied.

NEW YORK TIMES.

New York, Aug. 11.

Notwithstanding the new movement of the armies of the Rhine, and the concentration of portions of the French forces at Metz, the Times' correspondent expects an engagement of great importance to-day. The Times' correspondent went on board the Andrew Fletcher with a flag of truce, and was permitted to pass the German lines. He found the Prussian army in fine condition, and confident of victory. The Prussians were in possession of Wissembourg, Weissenburg, Lauterburg, Landau, Germersheim, Spires, Neustadt, Frankenthal, Worms, Mayence, Darmstadt, Mannheim, Heidelberg, Carlsruhe, Rastadt, Offenburg, Kehl, Freiburg, Basle, Schaffhausen, Constance, Lindau, Ulm, Augsburg, Munich, Ingolstadt, Ratisbon, Passau, Landshut, Straubing, Deggendorf, Plattling, Landau, Passau, Linz, Vienna, Presburg, Pesth, Ofen, Comorn, Gran, Raab, Stuhlweissenburg, Szegedin, Temesvar, Arad, Carlsburg, Hermannstadt, Kronstadt, Bucharest, Giurgevo, Rustchuk, Varna, Shumla, Adrianople, Constantinople, Gallipoli, Dardanelles, Smyrna, Alexandria, Cairo, Suez, Jerusalem, Damascus, Beyrout, Tripoli, Alexandretta, Aleppo, Mosul, Bagdad, Bussorah, Bushire, Ispahan, Teheran, Meshed, Herat, Candahar, Cabul, Peshawur, Attock, Lahore, Umritsur, Loodiana, Delhi, Agra, Allahabad, Benares, Calcutta, Dacca, Chittagong, Akyab, Rangoon, Moulmein, Malacca, Singapore, Penang, Acheen, Calcutta, Madras, Pondicherry, Trichinopoly, Tanjore, Madura, Tuticorin, Columbo, Galle, Point de Galle, Aden, Mocha, Hodeida, Jiddah, Cosseir, Thebes, Cairo, Alexandria, Malta, Gibraltar, Tangier, Tetuan, Tarifa, Cadiz, Seville, Cordova, Granada, Malaga, Gibraltar, Algeciras, Tarifa, Tangier, Tetuan, Ceuta, Oran, Algiers, Bona, Tunis, Tripoli, Benghazi

PRAYER FOR RAIN.

BY RAY PALMER BROWN.

Spare yet the autumn's pride, O God!
The stor smites the thirsting sod
And bitterly laments blistering soil
For right the land of Canaan near.

Are those not pearls which Nature's hand
Hath strung in beauty on each leaf?
Is not the smell of fruitful fields
An annual incense sweet to Thee?

Why should thy harvests fall apace?
Thy streams grow silent out of time.
Thy summer's warm is withered face
Before the turning of her prime?

The garden lands, the corn is sear
Withering oblivion of rain.
And mouth the moonlight of the year,
The North for pasture low in vain.

Fire on the hills where vineyard grow,
Fire on the meadows, fire on all!
I'm valueless in these wasted flow,
And lunch before the morning noon.

Hath heaven forbade the rights to soar
And sea-fowls mount the nibbled glare,
Or have the clouds, bemingling wrath,
Gone roaming in the forbid air?

God of the waters! bind the wings
Of all thy swells, in which are hid
Unlock the sealed, the rain springs,
And send the sweet, the lying rain.

WIDOWED'S WILL.

(Concluded.)

IV.

That night some twenty minutes past eight of the clock, my hansom, turning the Burton street corner on a sharp trot, was nearly bit but over by another hansom charging furiously down Bond street.

The two drivers exchanged abuse side of double-sided blasphemies, flogged their horses clear of each other, and started again, the offending John leading by a neck.

I was bound to Charing Cross, en route to Dover, Paris and Lindenhall, in the track of Lady Oswestry and Hector Wydowe; and in consequence of this delay only saved the 8½ mail by about two seconds. Another man however, ran it close still. A man in a furlined travelling robe, and pea jacket pulled over his eyes, took a fifteenth ticket to Lindenhall after me, and followed me on to the platform, half-a-dozen yards behind.

I heard him hurrying on after me just as the guard had opened the door of the empty car in which he caught me up and got in too. The door was slammed, the whistle shrieked, and the Dover mail started.

I had dropped into one corner; my companion had dropped himself into an opposite one. I lit a cigar, so did he; and we cleared London, and had run a dozen miles down the line before I looked again at him. I was thinking; what Helen's sudden departure bodied me; whether I was sure of winning her, after all; and deep in speculations of this sort, I had no eyes or thought for anything else.

Besides, that shapeless, traveling robe, and that peaked cap that kept his face in an impenetrable shadow, would have puzzled me, even if I had had a suspicion as to whom the man in the opposite corner was. And in the preparation for my sudden departure I had flung on a thick coat, and my little pair of wicked

So that it was not until I tore off his cap and flung aside his wrapper that Alvarez Smith and I were alone together at that carriage of the Dover mail train; and that he was glaring at me with all the furious hate he felt for me in his evil eyes.

I looked at him tranquilly enough, I think, but I couldn't help feeling that the rod centre was by no means an agreeable one; that the express stopped nowhere between London and Dover, and that Alvarez Smith was probably as mad as many inmates of Bedlam.

However, I am not chilly put off head, and as I say, returned his glance with a tranquil stare, and went on smoking.

Whether he had expected his mistake to produce more effect, and was disappointed; whether my calmness irritated him afresh, I don't know. Certain it is that he arose and came toward me with an oath.

It struck me forcibly that he was dangerous, and I gradually slipped my hand into the inner breast pocket of my traveling jacket, and unfastened the loop which kept a useful little revolver de poche steady there.

There seemed likely to be a necessity, disagreeable one imperative, for shooting this man before we got to Dover. And it so happened that I felt in no humor to run any risk by the exercise of an unwise forbearance to wind a madbrute like this, if he came to fight.

It appeared, though, that he had something to say before he began, for he seated himself exactly opposite to me, and muttered hoarsely:

"So we are alone at last, you and I."

"So it seems," I returned. I saw that if he meant to have a row, he didn't feel quite up to the mark yet, and wanted to talk himself into the necessary fury. So I thought I might venture to light another cigar, which I did, losing my grip on the pistol for a moment, but keeping my eye on the man the while.

He actually gnashed his yellow teeth at me. He looked so inutterably idiotic and at the same time so intensely ludicrous while he was doing it that I laughed.

"Take care!" he screamed, shivering with wrath. "You laugh now; let him laugh that wins! Caramba, you have not won yet."

"No?" I inquired, awakening.

"No, curse you! you never shall."

"Bah! you say so, my good man?"

"I have sworn it!"

"You?" I sneered rather enjoying his fury, and with no mind to spare him my stab I could give him. "You are madder than I thought you were."

"You shall never have her! Madre de dios! never."

"You're wrong, I shall."

He smiled in a ghastly manner with his white, dry lips.

"No," he said, and his tone was clearer, as was twice as dangerous and threatening now. "No, I shall keep my oath—be sure of that. Listen!" he went on, after a pause, with that same, horrid calmness; "from the day I saw her first, and each day more and more I have loved her—this woman who,—"

"Without that same day, and each day and more and more, has loathed and hated you," I struck in, "if she could."

By the light of the lamp above us I could see his yellow face turn that ashen line of a dead man's as that cruel taunt of mine hit home.

He covered his face with his hands, and muttered a faint dull moan, as though he had in very good deed got his death-hurt.

The pace was evidently approaching; the madman could hardly contain himself much longer. In another minute he might be at my throat; and then disagreeable as it might be, I should inevitably have to shoot him. Alvarez Smith was by no means the sort of person to stand on much ceremony with when the instincts he inherited from the Spanish creole of a mother or his were in the ascendant. And it was this, on reflecting, I began to think. I drew the revolver quickly out of my pocket, and covered him from my knee in anticipation of his rush.

"Now," he hissed, "will you promise never to marry this woman?"

"I'll see you in Gehenna first."

"You will not?"

"Content you, no!" But I'll promise you this," I added, as I saw him crouching like a jaguar for a spring at my throat, "that mad man or no madman, if you lay a finger on me I will shoot you in your tracks without further warning."

Raising my right hand quickly, I covered him fairly now. My amiable companion dropped back into his seat, with a few hideous Spanish blasphemy, most unexpectedly baffled and beaten.

"That's right," I said considerably relieved to find he was not so mad as to have lost all fear for himself, and put me under the painful necessity of winging him. Of course you didn't expect me to be so well able to take care of myself, and I suppose you've only a knife. I don't much think you'll kill me tonight, after all, though you are alone, etc., as you were good enough to remind me just now."

"Oh!" he snarled, "I shall kill you yet."

"I differ with you there. My own impression is that you'll be in Hanwell, or Charleston before long. Meanwhile, let me advise you not to try this again. If you do, remember I've warned you."

He flung a curse at me, and, turning away, he flung himself up in his cloak, and never moved again till the mail ran into the Dover station. Then he rose suddenly, opened the door, sprang on to the platform, and disappeared.

"And so you ran away from me, Helen?"

It was some three or four days after my rival in Lindenhad. I had forced the consequence carried Lady Oswestry's rooms, in the Russia by storm, utterly discomfiting the gunison by the suddenness and vigor of my assault, inasmuch that after a brief, hopeless struggle, he surrendered at discretion. My flattering has spoken the words that bound her life in mine forever.

Under the summer stars, in the hush of the summer night, she and I were sitting on the balcony of their room that overlooked the river and the purple woods beyond; at her feet, as I loved best to sit, and watch the great violet eyes turn slowly on me—her feet, with her hands in mine again.

"And, so you ran away from me, Helen?"

"What else could I do? I was so weak with you, Frank; so weak against my love. And for your sake, I felt it ought not to be. I ran away. It was terrible work to get away to start that night, though! She was horribly cruel to me. [illegible] was very, very weak and ill. And I was so afraid for you. I was afraid you would—"

"And so you ran away from me, Helen?"

She gave me a [illegible] my reach.

"Quite right. [illegible] dear. So you see, I was [illegible] harden my heart. Think, Frank, [illegible] of you."

"Infamous wrong. How could you go? Let [illegible] faith, not to [illegible] nothing cannot [illegible]

"I saw, Smith [illegible] made she [illegible] in the [illegible] dangers, [illegible] my guard.

"I saw him standing there, and she pointed again to right before her.

"And how was he dressed?"

"For a short [illegible] I screamed. I saw him throw it back [illegible] lifted his arm."

"And then he disappeared—where?"

"Into the shadow of the trees."

That was perfectly possible. A couple of strides would take any one out of sight, who had stood even in the center of the road.

If Helen had really seen Alvarez Smith, he might be hidden within sixteen yards, or within sixteen inches. My blood began to stir at this.

I had been just a week in the Bad when the denouement of this story came out.

We had gone up the river one morning in a "tub-boat," and landed some three miles or so above Lindenhad, and strolled away, out of sight of the boat, for a longer, lonelier walk, down to which extended the low scrub and brushwood of the forest.

We sat down in a little ring which overhung the river, and from which Helen had discovered a view, which she was doing her best to sketch under an organ-grinder's fire of interruptions from me. Trying therefore her best, by walking her eyes, and thinking of the love, and thinking of their new life and of Frank, and that was precious to me for her sake, I was terribly near my death.

There was hardly a breath of air astir, and yet, all at once, my pot hat, that was tilted over my eyes to keep off the glare, rolled away lazily across the river, dipped, so neatly and lightly, that I hardly felt it off my head, and then, after a slow circle, sank, with little puff of white smoke rising above a chimney of brushwood, explained the phenomena.

I saw at once what it meant, and, without a word, I sprang across to the cover which sheltered my would-be assassin, in a couple of bounds. Another bullet whizzed by my head, and then I had sprung into the thicket, struck by one lucky blow a smoking revolver from the shaking hands, and down at the throat of—Alvarez Smith.

It was well I had hit so true; he got no chance of using his knife.

I heard Helen scream, and then saw her fall kneeling on the turf where we had been sitting, and then I was wrestling for dear life with a madman.

He had no science, but he held me like a vice. I set him on his legs again and again, but he clung so desperately to me that I could not drop him. Each fresh struggle brought me nearer and nearer the edge of the river, till I guessed what he wanted to do, and put all my remaining strength into one fierce, desperate effort to fling him.

This time he went down, but my foot had slipped on the dry, soft turf, and he managed to pull me down upon him.

I felt his arms close round me in a grip of steel as he rolled and writhed toward the edge. I heard his yell of diabolical triumph in my ears. I knew that we must roll over. I felt the earth slip away from me; felt the awful rush of air by me, [illegible] and then [illegible] arms, the water [illegible] darkness.

He must have [illegible] in the fall, and have been [illegible] he reached the [illegible]

The body of Alvarez Smith was found next day.
